PRAISE FOR THE PREVIOUS EDITIONS:

“Packed with information for establishing an impressive range of courses.”
—PACIFIC RESEARCH

“Provides unsurpassed resources for teachers.... Anyone planning a new course or reviving an old one would be wise to start here.... Regardless of the approach one chooses in teaching peace studies, the syllabi provide starting points for virtually any topic a student may want to research. I imagine my copy getting worn, stained, and dog-eared in fairly short order and remaining in active use long after.”
—PEACE & CHANGE

Fully revised to reflect the realities of the post-September 11 world, this acclaimed curricular reference provides a comprehensive review of the field of peace, justice, and security studies.

Seven introductory essays systematically cover the state of the discipline today, surveying current intellectual and pedagogical themes. These are followed by seventy classroom-tested syllabuses organized by topics and including course descriptions, schedules, bibliographies, and notes on successful teaching practices. In keeping with the multifaceted nature of the subject, multiple perspectives, among them political science, philosophy, religious studies, sociology, and anthropology, are fully represented in this indispensable resource.

NEW!

There is increasing consensus among scholars and policy analysts that successful peacebuilding can occur only in the context of capable state institutions. But how can legitimate and sustainable states best be established in the aftermath of civil wars? And what role should international actors play in supporting the vital process?

Addressing these questions, this state-of-the-art volume explores the core challenges involved in institutionalizing postconflict states. The combination of thematic chapters and in-depth case studies covers the full range of the most vexing and diverse problems confronting domestic and international actors seeking to build states while building peace.

Charles T. Call is assistant professor of international relations at American University. Vanessa Hawkins Wyeth is on the staff of the International Peace Academy, where she focuses on issues of statebuilding and peacebuilding.

Building States to Build Peace

Charles T. Call, with Vanessa Hawkins Wyeth, editors

How do rule of law programs contribute to conflict management? What strategies best address the challenges to securing the rule of law in fragile countries? What place do rule of law policies have in efforts to achieve stable and equitable development?

The authors of Civil War and the Rule of Law address these fundamental questions, analyzing rule of law programs in the context of conflict prevention, peacekeeping, and peacebuilding activities. Throughout the book, they emphasize the critical relationship linking the rule of law, security, development, and human rights.

Agnès Hurwitz is in the Office of the President of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia. Reyko Huang, formerly a program officer at the International Peace Academy, is a doctoral candidate in political science at Columbia University.

From Soldiers to Politicians: Transforming Rebel Movements After Civil War

Jeroen de Zeeuw, editor

FROM SOLDIERS

Movements

Civil War

EDITED BY
JEROEN DE ZEEUW

“This book covers an important topic, the transformation of armies and paramilitaries into political actors.... The contributors are known experts in their field and the quality of the case studies is very high.”

“The case studies are excellent—well-written and carefully researched—and will attract a broad readership.”

—TERRENCE LYONS

In the transition from war-torn societies to stable multiparty democracies, what is the role of former rebel leaders? Can rebel movements effectively transform themselves from military to political organizations? From Soldiers to Politicians explores when and how militias succeed in reorienting their goals and practices toward legitimate political activities, and how external actors can support that practice.

The authors present eight theoretically grounded country studies, focusing in each on the historical background of the rebel movement, its (attempted or successful) transformation into a political party, and the factors explaining success or failure. Bridging the academic-policy divide, they identify concrete lessons from previous transformations processes, as well as options for future international involvement.

Jeroen de Zeeuw is senior research associate in the Conflict Research Unit at the Clingendael Institute of International Relations in the Netherlands.

“This practical and insightful book demonstrates why public finance issues should be of concern not only to economists, but to all policymakers working with fragile postconflict societies.”

—SARAH CLIFFE

“Fiscal policy is critical to sustaining peace, as well as development. Peace and the Public Purse covers this vital issue comprehensively, insightfully, and realistically. It is essential reading for anyone working on postconflict societies.”

—FRANCES STEWART

In the aftermath of violent conflict, how do the economic challenges of statebuilding intersect with the political challenges of peacebuilding? How can the international community help lay the fiscal foundations for a sustainable state and a durable peace? Peace and the Public Purse examines these questions, lifting the curtain that often has separated economic policy from peace implementation.

Drawing on recent experiences in Afghanistan, Bosnia, Cambodia, Timor-Leste, Guatemala, Palestine, and Uganda, the authors bring to life a key dimension of how both peace and states are built.

James K. Boyce is professor of economics at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. Madalene O'Donnell is on the staff of the UN Department of Peacekeeping Operations.

"Does an excellent job of reviewing how Western democracies are dealing with the challenge of fragile states.... a fine accomplishment full of needed candor and practical recommendations."

—ANDREW NATSIOS

With fragile states representing both a core development challenge and a source of major threats to international security, the search for strategies to assist the recovery of failing and war-torn countries has been high on the agendas of donor countries. Stewart Patrick and Kaysie Brown candidly assess efforts to bring together diplomatic, defense, and development instruments—the so-called 3Ds of "whole of government strategies"—made by seven major donor countries: Australia, Canada, France, Germany, Sweden, the United Kingdom, and the United States.

Cowardly Lions: Missed Opportunities to Prevent Deadly Conflict and State Collapse

I. William Zartman

"As Zartman argues, 'analysis is always hortatory, serving as the basis for action, and exhortation should always be analytical, based on sound examination and reasoning.' This well-stated position is equally well carried out by Zartman—one of our discipline's lions, and never a cowardly one." —BRUCE W. JENTLESON, INTERNATIONAL STUDIES REVIEW

"[A] significant contribution to the literature on conflict management and resolution." —CHOICE

What would have happened had the "road not taken" been the chosen action in past conflict interventions? What can we learn from a close look at alternatives that were not selected? Drawing on six detailed case studies (the Balkans, Haiti, Lebanon, Liberia, Somalia, and Zaire/Congo), I. William Zartman identifies a series of missed opportunities—options that arguably would have provided feasible and better outcomes for the reduction of violent conflict and the prevention of state collapse.

Zartman specifies potential solutions within the entire trajectory of each conflict, considering in each instance why the indicated decisions were not taken. The principles and mechanisms that he develops in the course of his analysis have profound implications for the actions of the international community in preventing conflicts from escalating to violence, and for managing violent situations when they do occur.

I. William Zartman is Jacob Blaustein Professor of International Organization and Conflict Resolution at the School of Advanced International Studies, Johns Hopkins University.

"Through a series of frank, incisive country case studies, this valuable volume takes the measure of international democracy assistance in postconflict countries."

—THOMAS CAROTHERS

"This unique volume offers a valuable lesson concerning what the international community can and cannot do to assist democracy building in postconflict situations, as well as authoritative recommendations for how to do it better."

—PETER BURNELL

"An engaging set of case studies, rich in detail and accessibly written, that underscore the complicated and challenging nature of war-to-democracy transitions."

—TIMOTHY D. SISK

Few would dispute the importance of donating funds and expertise to conflict-ridden societies—but such aid, however well meant, often fails to have the intended effect. This study critically evaluates international democratization assistance in postconflict societies to discern what has worked, what has not, and how aid programs can be designed to have a more positive impact.

The authors offer a unique recipient perspective as they explore three dimensions of democracy promotion: elections, free media, and human rights. Drawing on the experiences of Afghanistan, Cambodia, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Guatemala, Mozambique, Rwanda, Sierra Leone, and Uganda, they suggest concrete ways in which the international community can better foster democratization in the wake of conflict.

Promoting Democracy in Postconflict Societies

Jeroen de Zeeuw and Krishna Kumar, editors

"Rich in detail.... This volume contributes with important knowledge on democracy assistance."

—HELGA MALMIN BINNINGSBØ,
JOURNAL OF PEACE RESEARCH

PRAISE FOR THE ANNUAL REVIEW:

“An indispensable source for scholars and policymakers alike, joining up-to-date assessments of the latest peacekeeping missions with thoughtful evaluations of developments in the scholarly literature. Rarely, if ever before, have inside expertise and outside analysis of peacekeeping been so well combined.”

—MICHAEL DOYLE

“Combining a rich analysis of developments in peacekeeping with a detailed set of data on UN missions, the Annual Review is a valuable resource for policymakers, practitioners, and scholars alike.”

—LAKHDAR BRAHIMI

“An essential resource for understanding peacekeeping’s contribution to international security.” —STEPHEN STEDMAN

Unique in its breadth of coverage, the Annual Review of Global Peace Operations presents the most detailed collection of data on peace operations—those launched by the UN, by regional organizations, by coalitions, and by individual nations—that is available. Features of the 2008 volume include:

- a summary analysis of the trends and developments in peace operations through 2007
- a discussion of the nature and implications of “peacekeeping partnerships” among institutions involved in field operations

- incisive analyses of all peacekeeping missions on the ground in 2007
- in-depth explorations of key missions, focusing on those that faced significant challenges or underwent major developments during the year
- extensive, full-color maps, figures, and photographs

The editorially independent Review is a project of the Center on International Cooperation at New York University, with the support of the Peacekeeping Best Practices Section of the UN’s Department of Peacekeeping Operations and in cooperation with the International Peace Academy.

“Anderlini moves beyond the well-tread path with this measured, well-informed analysis of the impact of women on building and maintaining peace. Her work should be mandatory reading for students, scholars, and practitioners in the fields of conflict resolution and security studies.”

—JULIE MERTUS

How and why do women’s contributions matter in peace and security processes? Why should women’s activities in this sphere be explored separately from peacebuilding efforts in general? Decisively answering these questions, Sanam Anderlini offers a comprehensive, cross-regional analysis of women’s peacebuilding initiatives around the world.

Anderlini also traces the evolution of international policies in this arena and highlights the endemic problems that stunt progress. Her astute analysis, based on extensive research and field experience, demonstrates how gender sensitivity in programming can be a catalytic component in the complex task of building sustainable peace—and provides concrete examples of how to draw on women’s untapped potential.

Sanam Naraghi Anderlini is a research affiliate at the Center for International Studies, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

“Sandra Whitworth has written a compelling book.... Though writing from a feminist perspective, she provides a balanced look at the institutions of the military and the United Nations.”

—DARLENE ISKRA, ARMED FORCES & SOCIETY

“The critical questions [Whitworth] raises enrich the debate over how best to deal with threats to international peace.”

—MARGARET P. KARNS, PERSPECTIVES ON POLITICS

“Whitworth digs deep into the cultural politics of internationalized war, peace, and security.... The result is compulsory and gripping reading.”

—CYNTHIA ENLOE

In this important, controversial, and at times troubling book, Sandra Whitworth

Jonathan Goodhand compares the programs of international and national NGOs in seven conflict arenas: Afghanistan, Armenia-Azerbaijan, Kyrgyzstan, Liberia, Moldova, Nepal, and Sri Lanka. Well grounded in an analysis of the political-economy context of each conflict, his important and perhaps unexpected results point to essential policy and practice changes in the interest of enhanced NGO peacebuilding efforts. Not least, they also highlight the need for a fundamental adjustment of expectations.

Aiding Peace? The Role of NGOs in Armed Conflict

“To date the most ambitious—and successful—attempt to address the wide variety of tools available for policymakers to reduce the negative effects of natural resource endowments like diamonds, oil and timber.”

—HENRIK URDAL, JOURNAL OF PEACE RESEARCH

Providing both a means and a motive for armed conflict, the continued access of combatants in contemporary civil wars to lucrative natural resources has often served to counter the incentives for peace. Profiting from Peace offers the first comprehensive assessment of the practical strategies and tools that might be used effectively, by both international and state actors, to help reduce the illicit exploitation of natural resources and the related financial flows that sustain the violence.

Ending Civil Wars: The Implementation of Peace Agreements

Stephen John Stedman, Donald Rothchild, and Elizabeth M. Cousens, editors

“An excellent book that cumulates and advances theory while it offers policy relevant findings and recommendations.... A remarkable publication.” —THOMAS OHLSON, INTERNATIONAL STUDIES REVIEW

Ending Civil Wars is the most comprehensive, systematic study to date of the implementation of peace agreements—of what happens after the treaties are signed.

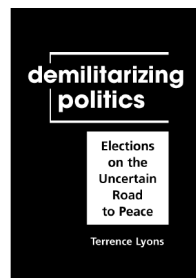

Stephen John Stedman is senior fellow at the Center for International Security and Cooperation, Stanford University. The late Donald Rothchild was professor of political science at the University of California, Davis. Elizabeth M. Cousens is chief of staff for the UN mission in Nepal.

Demilitarizing Politics: Elections on the Uncertain Road to Peace

Terrence Lyons

“Lyons captures the complex and often contradictory dynamics of elections in the wake of civil war peace agreements in his well-designed, thoroughly researched, and coherent book.” —TIMOTHY D. SISK, PERSPECTIVES ON POLITICS

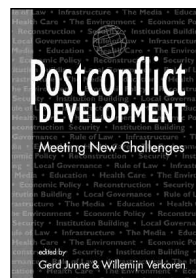

With the increasing use of elections as a tool for peacebuilding after civil war, the question of why some postconflict elections succeed and others fail is a crucial one. Tackling this question, Terrence Lyons finds the answer in the internal political dynamics that occur between the cease-fire and the voting.

Lyons shows that the promise of elections can provide the incentive for the demilitarization of politics—the transformation of institutions made powerful by war into those capable of sustaining peace—so that warring parties will in fact choose to change their strategies and adapt to peaceful electoral competition. It is this process of demilitarization that is in turn key to meaningful elections; elections alone, as has been seen repeatedly, are not enough to advance the dual goals of peace and democracy.

Incorporating evidence from a range of recent cases, Demilitarizing Politics offers a concrete strategy for peaceful change that can be implemented, and that can make a difference.

Postconflict Development: Meeting New Challenges

Gerd Junne and Willemijn Verkoren, editors

“What kind of peace is being created by peacebuilding and development processes? How is this peace experienced by local recipients? Is peace sustainable in the future? A welcome and well-crafted volume, Postconflict Development effectively addresses these questions.” —OLIVER RICHMOND, INTERNATIONAL STUDIES REVIEW

“An appropriate and excellent text for graduate courses in the disciplines of Conflict Resolution, Economics, International Politics, Peace Studies, and Social Change. Additionally, upper-level and honors undergraduate courses in similar areas could benefit from this work.” —TISA M. ANDERS, INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL ON WORLD PEACE

Prosperity, the authors of Postconflict Development acknowledge, does not guarantee peace; but a lack of economic development will almost certainly lead to renewed violence. This conviction informs their thorough discussion of the policy dilemmas confronted in postconflict situations and a range of concrete, successful approaches to resolving them.

Gerd Junne is professor of international relations at the University of Amsterdam. Willemijn Verkoren conducts research in the area of conflict resolution and management at the University of Amsterdam.

“Combines conceptual rigour, a wide-ranging understanding of the relevant academic literature and an impressive grasp of major contemporary peacebuilding cases.... A concise yet highly informative overview of this subject.” —CHARLES O. LERCHE, JOURNAL OF PEACE RESEARCH

“Splendid.... a masterful, comprehensive assessment of peacebuilding in contemporary international relations. The combination of overarching conceptualization and detailed case-specific discussions enables the reader to arrive at a new understanding of both the role of peacebuilding in the field and the ways in which it is actually handled.” —JUERGEN DEDRING

This integrative discussion of the multiple dimensions of peacebuilding in postconflict societies offers a systematic approach to strategies and processes for long-term social, political, and economic transformation.

Ho-Won Jeong links short-term crisis-intervention efforts to a sustained process that encompasses the entire complex environment of a conflict. His broad analytic framework and wealth of concrete examples provide a sophisticated, yet accessible, guide to the many strands and interrelations in this critical arena of world politics.

Peacebuilding in Postconflict Societies: Strategy and Process

Ho-Won Jeong

“The authors of this insightful volume make an eloquent and convincing case.... Drawing on many sources of expertise, they debate each other and in doing so engage readers searching for an image of what a sustainable peace might be for war-torn Iraq.”

—MICHAEL DOYLE

“This volume brings together many authoritative voices, all offering options to help avoid the worst in Iraq. The editors have done a masterful job of eliciting a broad range of informed opinion, allowing readers to draw conclusions of their own.”

—LAKHDAR BRAHIMI

An enduring epicenter of conflict and instability in the Middle East, Iraq has not only experienced domestic upheavals, but also generated threats to international peace and security for more than 25 years. Is an end to the violence, and the establishment of an enduring peace within a unified state, a realistic goal? How can it be achieved, and what may stand in its way?

Addressing these questions—and arguing that a downward spiral of violence and possible state collapse can be avoided—the authors of Iraq: Preventing a New Generation of Conflict consider the sources of conflict in the country and outline the requirements for a successful peacebuilding enterprise.

Islam and Peacemaking in the Middle East begins with a set of provocative questions: How do Muslims conceive of peace? To what degree do differences in the interpretation of Islam affect the ways in which peace is sought in the contemporary Middle East?

Through analysis of regional trends and case studies, the authors explore various Islamic ideas of peace and their bearing on difficult ethnic, nationalist, and civic conflicts. The result widens the parameters for serious discussion of Islam's contributions—real and potential—to ongoing negotiations.

Western Sahara: Anatomy of a Stalemate

Erik Jensen

“This gracefully written and well argued book will obviously be useful to anyone with an interest in Western Saharan and North African affairs, but students of the United Nations itself and the means by which it adapts to novel regional and local circumstances in a complex political environment will also want this volume as an important part of their collections.”

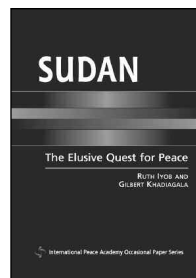

—ANTHONY G. PAZZANITA,
INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL OF AFRICAN HISTORICAL STUDIES

The long-running conflict over the sovereignty of Western Sahara has involved all the states of northwest Africa and many beyond since Spain ceded the territory to Morocco and Mauritania in 1976. Erik Jensen traces the evolution of the conflict—from its colonial roots to its present manifestation as a political stalemate.

Jensen reviews the history of the dispute, describes the quest by the UN and interested states to facilitate a process of self-determination through a referendum on independence versus integration with Morocco, and explores the impasse over how to determine who should be allowed to vote in such a referendum. He then turns to the more recent efforts of UN Secretary-General Kofi Annan’s personal envoy for Western Sahara, James Baker, to resolve the conflict. Despite Baker’s 2003 peace plan, the government of Morocco and the Polisario Front remain at odds, and the stalemate continues.

Erik Jensen served with the UN Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara (MINURSO) in 1993–1998, from 1994 as head of the mission.

Sudan: The Elusive Quest for Peace

Ruth Iyob and Gilbert M. Khadiagala

Embroiled in civil war since independence, Sudan has also suffered from the failure of both regional and international actors to fully come to terms with the scope of the complex issues involved. Sudan: The Elusive Quest for Peace contributes to a fuller understanding of those issues, exploring the factors that have contributed to the conflict from the days following independence to the present.

Iyob and Khadiagala concisely examine the cultural, sociopolitical, economic, and geographical facets of the prolonged hostilities, then assess a sequence of mediation efforts. They also distill the web of grievances that fuel the current conflict in the Darfur region. They conclude with a thoughtful analysis that highlights the potential obstacles to sustainable peace in Sudan in the decades to come.

Ruth Iyob is associate professor of comparative politics and international relations at the University of Missouri–St. Louis. Gilbert M. Khadiagala is Jan Smuts Professor of International Relations at the University of Witwatersrand.

CHOICE OUTSTANDING ACADEMIC BOOK!

“Offering the clearest explanations this reviewer has read in English, Nest reports on the political economy of Congo’s wars of the 1990s and the early 21st century; Grignon discusses the economic agendas in the Congolese peace process; and Kisangani analyzes the legacies of the war economy.... Highly recommended.”

—CHOICE

Despite the prominent role that competition over natural resources has played in some of Africa’s most intractable conflicts, little research has been devoted to what the economic dimensions of armed conflict mean for peace operations and efforts to reconstruct war-torn states. Redressing this gap, this volume analyzes the challenges that the war economy posed, and continues to pose, for policymakers and practitioners in the Democratic Republic of Congo.

The authors first trace the historical role of natural resource exploitation in shaping economic development and governance in the country. Then turning to the 1998–2004 period, they assess how economic interests shaped both the peace process and the belligerents’ attitudes toward resolution of the violent conflict that wracked the DRC. They also address the impact of the war economy on postwar reconstruction and identify strategies for more effective approaches to resolving—and even preventing—further economically driven civil wars.

Michael Nest consults on the political and social issues related to the extraction of natural resources. François Grignon is head of the UN Mission’s Conflict and Prevention Unit in the DRC. Emizet F. Kisangani is associate professor of political science at Kansas State University.

African Guerrillas: Raging Against the Machine

Morten Bøås and Kevin C. Dunn, editors

“A fine set of essays and a worthy successor to Clapham’s collection.... Highly recommended.”

—CHOICE

“This is a major contribution to our understanding of the motives and circumstances behind some of the most brutal civil wars on the continent.”

—RENÉ LEMARCHAND

“A sophisticated and detailed treatment of contemporary African civil wars that goes well beyond earlier contributions.”

—M. CRAWFORD YOUNG

At the center of many of Africa’s violent conflicts are movements that do not seem to fit any established theories of armed resistance. African Guerrillas offers new models for understanding these movements, eschewing one-dimensional explanations.

The authors build on—and in some cases debate—the insights provided in Christopher Clapham’s groundbreaking work. They find a new generation of fighters—one that reflects rage against the machinery of a dysfunctional state. Their analysis of this phenomenon, combining thematic chapters and a range of representative case studies, is a crucial contribution to any effort to understand Africa’s war-torn societies.

Morten Bøås is researcher at the Fafo Institute for Applied International Studies in Oslo. Kevin C. Dunn is associate professor of political science at Hobart and William Smith Colleges.

The Democratic Republic of Congo: Economic Dimensions of War and Peace

Michael Nest, with François Grignon and Emizet F. Kisangani

“Young Soldiers is a book that provides the reader with a powerful opportunity to learn from the ‘inside out.’ It is an opportunity that should not be missed.”

—SHYRL TOPP MATIAS, INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL ON WORLD PEACE

“A mine of information about children and war.”

—ED CAIRNS, THE ETHNIC CONFLICT RESEARCH DIGEST

“I personally believe that when people are young, others can abuse them. It is my very unfortunate fate that I was drawn into wars. If instead of war skills, I knew other skills and knowledge, now I could use my knowledge and expertise. Then today I would be an engineer or doctor or something else useful for my society and myself.” —JAVAD, AFGHANISTAN

“I want to advise people who want to be rebel fighters, young soldiers, that they should learn from what we have gone through, which is too sad an experience. Those children younger than we are should never again be involved in such a life anymore.” —ARTHUR, SIERRA LEONE

They are part of rebel factions, national armies, paramilitaries, and other armed groups and entrenched in some of the most violent conflicts around the globe. They are in some ways still children—yet, from Afghanistan to Sierra Leone to Northern Ireland, you can find them among the fighters. Why?

Young Soldiers explores the reasons that adolescents who are neither physically forced nor abducted choose to join armed groups. Drawing on in-depth interviews with the soldiers themselves, the authors challenge conventional wisdom to offer a thought-provoking account of the role that war, poverty, education, politics, identity, family, and friends all play in driving these young men and women to join military life. They also address the important issues of demobilization and the reintegration process.

International in scope, covering a variety of situations in Afghanistan, Colombia, Congo-Brazzaville, Democratic Republic of Congo, Pakistan, Sierra Leone, South Africa, Sri Lanka, and the United Kingdom, Young Soldiers concludes with a discussion of the steps needed to create an environment in which adolescents are no longer “forced” to volunteer.

Young Soldiers: Why They Choose To Fight

*Rachel Brett
and Irma Specht*

“Important, impressive, thought-provoking and action-motivating. I recommend this with enthusiasm.”

—MICHAEL J. LENAGHAN, INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL ON WORLD PEACE

Individuals can make a difference working for peace worldwide. That is the message of People Building Peace II, an inspiring collection of stories of how “ordinary” men and women have played a crucial part in conflict prevention and peacebuilding.

Thematic chapters, illustrated with compelling case studies, present new trends in the role of civil society in conflict transformation. The cases reflect the variety of activities initiated and sustained by a broad range of actors, including women’s groups, youth groups, and faith-based organizations. Such topics as reconciliation, dialogue, networking, and traditional methods of conflict resolution are among the topics thoroughly explored, as are the successful initiatives of lesser-known NGOs.

Peacekeeping in East Timor: The Path to Independence

Michael G. Smith, with Moreen Dee

“A fascinating account succinctly captures the gist of how [the UN] did, and should, address the host of practical issues associated with transferring power from the international community to a formerly dependent people.”

—ASIL NEWSLETTER

“A valuable addition to the literature on East Timor. It is particularly welcome, given Smith's prominence in the East Timor operation as an important actor.”

—ANTHONY L. SMITH, CONTEMPORARY SOUTHEAST ASIA

Continuing the compelling narrative begun by Ian Martin in Self-Determination in East Timor, Smith gives a lucid first-hand account of a UN mission in the unfamiliar role of interim government—a mission dealing with critical requirements for good governance, sustainable development, and effective military and police forces. Evaluating the lessons learned from the experience, he highlights the urgent need for reforms within the UN. The absence of those reforms, he believes, will lead to more failed states, more refugees, more poverty, and more dead peacekeepers.

Major General Michael G. Smith (recently retired from the Australian army after 34 years of distinguished service) was deputy force commander of the UNTAET peacekeeping force from January 2000 through March 2001. He is currently chief executive officer of AUSTCARE. Moreen Dee is a diplomatic and military historian contracted to the Australian Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade.

Reflecting a growing awareness of the need to integrate security and development agendas in the field of conflict management, the authors of this original volume focus on the case of the Pacific Islands. In the process, they also reveal the sociopolitical diversity, cultural richness, and social resilience of a little-known region. Their work not only offers insight into the societies discussed, but also speaks to the realities of political community and state-building efforts throughout the developing world.

Security and Development in the Pacific Islands: Social Resilience in Emerging States

M. Anne Brown, editor

When and why is war justified? How, morally speaking, should wars be fought? The Morality of War confronts these challenging questions, surveying the fundamental principles and themes of the just war tradition through the words of the philosophers, jurists, and warriors who have shaped it.

The collection begins with the foundational works of just war theory, as well as those of two competing perspectives, realism and pacifism. Subsequent selections focus on issues related to the resort to war, the conduct of war, and the judgment of war crimes. Both traditional just war concerns and those that have emerged in response to contemporary developments—such as the US “war on terror”—are thoroughly covered.

With articles that are crucially relevant to today’s world paired with contextual introductions to each section, the reader is ideally constructed to inform and guide students as they consider the morality of past and current military actions.

David Kinsella is associate professor of political science at the Hatfield School of Government, Portland State University. Craig L. Carr is professor of political science at the Hatfield School of Government.

The Black Academic’s Guide to Winning Tenure—Without Losing Your Soul

KERRY ANN ROCKQUEMORE AND TRACEY LASZLOFFY

“A critical resource for black junior faculty who are attempting to negotiate the politics of promotion and tenure at their institutions. Both sensible and effective.”

—Rainier Spencer, University of Nevada, Las Vegas

“Provides valuable information and practical tips.... This book outlines concrete steps any junior faculty member can and should take to help them win tenure—but it is especially valuable for faculty of color.” —Krista Johnson, Agnes Scott College

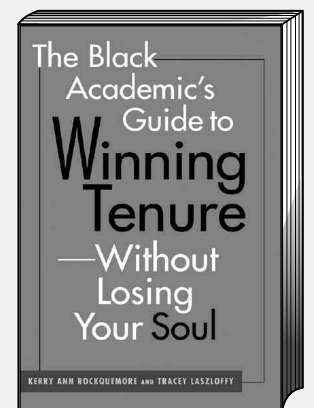

Addressing head-on how power and the thorny politics of race converge in the academy, The Black Academic’s Guide is full of invaluable tips and hard-earned wisdom. It is the essential handbook that will help faculty survive and thrive in academia without losing their voices, or their integrity.

Kerry Ann Rockquemore is associate professor of sociology and African American studies and founding director of the Black Faculty Retention Initiative at the University of Illinois at Chicago. Tracey Laszloffy is a coach and therapist for black and Latino faculty at predominately white institutions. The two cofounded www.BlackAcademic.com, a website for minority scholars.

CONTENTS: How to Win Tenure—Without Losing Your Soul. Understanding the Game. Race, Power, and the Academic System. Navigating the Rules of Engagement. Mastering Your Technique. Tenure and Time Management. The Academic Office. Healthy Pathways to Publication. The Art of Efficient Teaching and Service. Playing to Win. Shifting from Habits of Survival to Strategies for Success. Constructive Conflicts. Building a Supportive Network. Conclusion.
