

4TH EDITION

Understanding the Contemporary Middle East

Jillian Schwedler, editor

“A must read for specialists in the field and an excellent choice for broad surveys.... Highly recommended.” —Choice

Praise for the previous editions:

“A multi-dimensional picture of the Middle East that comes alive as you browse through the pages.... It is seldom that one comes across such a good introduction to the Middle East that could be used for both undergraduate and postgraduate level courses.” —Pinar Bilgin, Millennium

“A superb and engaging book profiling the region.... This unique volume is one of the few truly interdisciplinary books about the contemporary Middle East.” —Library Journal

The fourth edition of Understanding the Contemporary Middle East is fully revised and updated throughout to reflect the still-unfolding impact of the Arab Spring, the changing international environment, the impasse in the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, and much more. The book also includes an entirely new chapter on the role of women in the Middle East. Maps, photographs, and details of basic political data enhance the text, widely acknowledged as the best available introduction to the region.

Jillian Schwedler is professor of political science at Hunter College and the Graduate Center, City University of New York.

Understanding: Introductions to the States and Regions of the Contemporary World

Politics and Culture in Contemporary Iran: Challenging the Status Quo

Abbas Milani and Larry Diamond, editors

“This valuable book ... provide[s] an objective and critical analysis of Iran’s political development.” —Choice

“This finely crafted book ... allows readers to go beyond the official representation of the country and gain a deeper appreciation of the complexity of a rich and vibrant society.” —Library Journal

Despite the relative calm apparent in Iran today, there is unmistakable evidence of political, social, and cultural ferment stirring beneath the surface. The authors of Politics and Culture in Contemporary Iran—a group of scholars, activists, and artists—explore that unrest and its challenge to the legitimacy and stability of the present authoritarian regime.

Abbas Milani is Moghadam Director of Iranian Studies at Stanford University and codirector, with Larry Diamond, of the Iran Democracy Project at Stanford’s Hoover Institution. Larry Diamond is senior fellow at both the Hoover Institution and the Freeman Spogli Institute for International Studies at Stanford.

Democracy and Authoritarianism in the Arab World

Nicola Pratt

“Nicola Pratt provides a thorough analysis of a very complex subject.... A significant addition to our knowledge.”

—Clovis Maksoud, Political Science Quarterly

“This is the most sophisticated and powerful interrogation of the function of civil society in the Arab world available today.... For anyone interested in how political reform can be mounted in this crucial region, the book provides compelling reading.”

—Glen Rangwala, University of Cambridge

What explains the enduring rule of authoritarian regimes in the Arab world? Nicola Pratt offers an innovative approach to this recurring question, shedding light on the failure of democratization by examining both the broad dynamics of authoritarianism in the region and the particular role of civil society.

Pratt appraises the part that civil society actors played in the normalization of authoritarianism in the Middle East, the challenges that new organized groups now pose to entrenched Arab regimes, and the varying ways in which those regimes are responding. She also explores the diversity of conceptions of democracy among non-state actors. Arguing against the idea that Arab culture is inherently incompatible with democracy—the concept of Middle East “exceptionalism”—she assesses the realistic potential for democratization in the region.

Nicola Pratt is associate professor of international politics of the Middle East at the University of Warwick.

Beyond the Arab Spring: Authoritarianism and Democratization in the Arab World

Rex Brynen, Pete W. Moore, Bassel F. Salloukh, and Marie-Joëlle Zahar

“Provides a comprehensive explanatory framework with which to make sense of the Arab uprisings.”

—Jacob Høigilt, Journal of Islamic Studies

“A comprehensive assessment, at once sophisticated and accessible, of current developments and trends.”

—Elfatih A. Abdelsalam, The Muslim World Book Review

“An insightful and thought-provoking volume which addresses both the forces which have sustained authoritarianism in the region and the roots of popular mobilization.”

—Charis Bredin, Banipal

For years the authoritarian regimes of the Arab world displayed remarkable persistence. Then, beginning in December 2010, much of the region underwent rapid and remarkable political change. This volume explores the precursors, nature, and trajectory of the dynamics unleashed by the Arab Spring.

The authors focus on the complex forces that have sustained authoritarianism in the region, as well as the roots of popular mobilization and regime overthrow. They also examine the possibilities for democratic reform—and relapse. Their work offers a comprehensive assessment, at once sophisticated and accessible, of current developments and trends in the countries of the Arab Middle East and North Africa.

Rex Brynen is professor of political science at McGill University. Pete W. Moore is associate professor of political science at Case Western Reserve University. Bassel F. Salloukh is associate professor of political science at the Lebanese American University in Beirut. Marie-Joëlle Zahar is associate professor of political science at the University of Montreal.

2ND EDITION

Politics and Society in the Contemporary Middle East

Michele Penner Angrist, editor

Praise for the previous edition:

“Excellent.... An extremely clear and comprehensive introduction to the politics of the Middle East, far superior to other available texts.” —Samer Shehata, Georgetown University

“One of the most lucidly written, highly objective surveys on the politics of the Middle East ... available today.” —Elhum Haghighat, RoMES

This cutting-edge examination of the domestic politics of the Middle East—now thoroughly revised to reflect the events of the Arab Spring—has quickly proven itself ideal for classroom use.

The book has been designed to give students tools that will help them to analyze politics in the region not only during the present unsettled period, but also as events unfold. Offering insightful analyses and a wealth of accessible information, it encourages comparative, critical thinking by students at all levels.

Michele Penner Angrist is associate professor of political science at Union College.

ISLAMISM

A NEW TOTALITARIANISM

Mehdi Mozaffari

Islamism: A New Totalitarianism

Mehdi Mozaffari

“Timely and important.... a book that finally makes Islamism intelligible to Western students of history and politics.” —Roger Griffin, Oxford Brookes University

“An important contribution to debates on the role of totalitarian ideologies and movements in the 21st century.” —Uwe Backes, Hannah Arendt Institute, TU Dresden

From the reviews of the Danish edition:

“With its conceptual clarifications and analytical tools, [this book] opens the door to an understanding of the relation between Islam, Islamism, Islamization, and events in the Middle East.” —Lone Nørgaard, Jyllands-Posten

“Takes the debate about Islamism to a new and higher level of information and reflection.”

—Frederik Stjernfelt, University of Copenhagen

What exactly does Islamism mean? And what explains its violent expansion in recent decades? Are there similarities between Islamism and classical totalitarian regimes and ideologies? Will it fail, as those regimes did in Nazi Germany and the Soviet Union; or can it adapt effectively to changing realities? What are the fundamental strengths and weaknesses of the Islamic project?

Addressing these questions within a context both historical and global, Mehdi Mozaffari provides an important new framework for understanding the full impact of Islamism in the Middle East and beyond.

Mehdi Mozaffari is professor emeritus of political science at Aarhus University.

Women, Islam, and Resistance in the Arab World

Maria Holt and Haifaa Jawad

“Timely and important.... The authors provide a much needed examination of the diverse ways in which Muslim women in the Arab world challenge repressive rule.... [This] is an essential book for scholars and students of political resistance, state repression, and gender politics.” —Alice J. Kang, Perspectives on Politics

“A richly nuanced analysis of the complex ways in which Muslim women have drawn strength from their religion in resisting inequality and violence, whether generated from within their own community or from the outside.”

—Michaëlle Browsers, Middle East Journal

How are women in the Arab world negotiating the male-dominated character of Islamist movements? Is their participation in the Islamic political project—including violent resistance against foreign invasion and occupation—the result of coercion, or of choice? Questioning assumptions about female powerlessness in Muslim societies, Maria Holt and Haifaa Jawad explore the resistance struggles taking place in Lebanon, Iraq, Palestine, and elsewhere in the Middle East from the perspectives of the women involved.

The authors make extensive use of vivid personal testimonies as they examine the influence of such factors as religion, patriarchy, and traditional practices in determining women’s modes of participation in conflicts. In the process, they add to our knowledge not only of how women are affected by political violence, but also of how their involvement is beginning to change the rules that govern their societies.

Maria Holt is reader in the Department of Political Science at the University of Westminster, London. Haifaa Jawad is senior lecturer in Islamic and Middle Eastern studies at the University of Birmingham.

Modernizing Women: Gender and Social Change in the Middle East

Valentine M. Moghadam

Praise for the previous editions:

“One of the best studies of women and social change in the Middle East ever to be published.... Superb.” —Choice

“Moghadam addresses a bewildering array of puzzling anomalies and, slicing skillfully through them, exposes their bare bones and substructure.”

—Middle East Journal

Valentine Moghadam’s seminal study of the gendered nature of political and social processes in the Middle East and North Africa has been fully updated to reflect more than a decade of major changes.

This new edition reflects an emphasis on the impacts of both globalization and democratization. It also includes entirely new chapters on the gender dynamics of conflicts in the region, on women and the Arab Spring, and on the achievements of women’s rights movements. The result is an indispensable contribution to our understanding of current popular struggles for modernity, democratization, and meaningful citizenship.

Valentine M. Moghadam is professor of sociology and director of the International Affairs Program at Northeastern University.

Party Politics and the Prospects for Democracy in North Africa

Lise Storm

“Highly recommended.” —Choice

“Lise Storm separates the wheat from the chaff in North Africa’s political party scene.... [She] has made an important, impressive contribution to our understanding of political parties in North Africa, particularly in the post-Arab Spring context.” —Matt Buehler, Middle East Journal

What are the prospects for democracy in North Africa in the wake of the Arab Spring? Addressing that question, Lise Storm provides a rich analysis of party politics in the region.

Storm focuses on Tunisia, Morocco, and Algeria, examining the key characteristics and political dynamics of each country’s party system as they have evolved over time. Her research sheds light not only on the origins, development, and functioning of these parties, but also on their contribution to the survival of authoritarianism and their potential as vehicles for democratization.

Lise Storm is senior lecturer in Middle East politics at the Institute of Arab and Islamic Studies, University of Exeter.

What Is Political Islam?

Jocelyne Cesari

“Cesari provides a new and powerful framework for understanding the conditions of possibility for political Islam in a wide range of countries.... Her book represents the most important work on political Islam to appear in more than a decade.”

—Peter Mandaville, George Mason University

“A grounding work.... Cesari adds nuance to the question of how modernity evolved in the Muslim context and unravels common assumptions and cemented theories pertaining to political Islam.... Fascinating and unique.”

—Melissa Finn, University of Waterloo

The debate continues unabated: Is political Islam decipherable through the tenets of the Islamic tradition—or is it a tool of secular actors who shrewdly misuse religious references? Is it an expression of modernity, or a return to the past? Eschewing these dichotomies, Jocelyne Cesari demystifies the continuous process of interaction between secular and religious actors and institutions that is at the core of political mobilization in the name of Islam.

Cesari traces the origins of political Islam to the inception of the modern nation-state, revealing the decisive role of secular nationalist rulers in its creation. In the process, she puts to rest the myth that there has been a lack of modernization in the Muslim world—and shows how that myth has proven dangerous. Ranging from Senegal to Egypt, from Indonesia to Iraq, her analysis provides a much needed corrective to the “conventional wisdom.”

Jocelyne Cesari is professor of religion and politics at the University of Birmingham; senior research fellow at Georgetown University’s Berkley Center for Religion, Peace, and World Affairs; and professional fellow at the Australian Catholic University.
