NEW—3RD EDITION

African Development: Making Sense of the Issues and Actors

Todd J. Moss and Danielle Resnick

Praise for the previous editions:

“Thoughtful, well written.... [This] book leads the student to a deep understanding of the actors at work in Africa’s development.”

—Barry Riddell,
Canadian Journal of Development Studies

“Treating both political and economic themes with admirable clarity, [Moss] walks the reader briskly through Africa’s colonial legacy, the syndrome of personal rule, the economic liabilities of conflict, and the challenges of democratic reform.... Provides a thorough and critical but fair-minded treatment in a style that is plainspoken and often witty.” —Peter Lewis, Foreign Affairs

“An excellent introduction to current political and economic issues in Africa.... Highly recommended.” —Choice

Both authoritative and accessible, African Development introduces the issues, actors, and institutions at play in development trajectories across sub-Saharan Africa.

This new edition, thoroughly updated, includes an entirely new chapter devoted to key demographic trends in the region, especially rapid urbanization and the distinct “youth bulge.” There is also a review of major democratic gains and disappointments since 2011; analysis of renewed internal armed conflicts; and attention to the contemporary sovereign debt crisis relative to the structural adjustment debt of earlier decades.

The book uniquely brings to life the collective impact of history, economics, and politics on development in the region.

Todd J. Moss is senior fellow at the Center for Global Development and non-resident scholar at Rice University. Danielle Resnick is senior research fellow in the Development Strategy and Governance Division of the International Food Policy Research Institute.

Making Sense of the Issues and Actors

Todd J. Moss & Danielle Resnick

The Time of Youth: Work, Social Change, and Politics in Africa

Alcinda Honwana

“This clearly written, well-structured study summarizes the contemporary situation of African youth, but also regularly gestures toward a more global analysis of the generation that grew up in the shadow of structural adjustment and neoliberalism.... Highly recommended.”—Choice

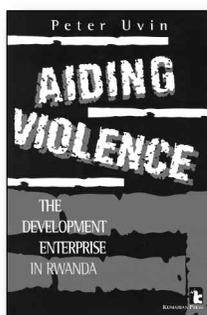

“An insightful and intriguing read ... highly recommended.”—Library Bookwatch

Most young Africans are living in a state of “waithood,” argues Alcinda Honwana, finding themselves suspended in limbo between childhood and adulthood. Failed neoliberal economic policies, bad governance, and political instability have caused stable jobs to disappear; and without jobs that pay living wages, these young people cannot become fully participating members of society. But that is only part of the story.

Examining the lives of young people in Mozambique, Senegal, South Africa, and Tunisia, Honwana focuses on the transformative potential of the waithood generation—not only in Africa, but also globally—as young people come to believe that the struggle to overcome their predicament requires radical social and political change. From organizing protests in the streets of Maputo, Dakar, Madrid, and New York, to sparking revolutions in Tunisia, Egypt, and Libya, the waithood generation, as we are reminded in The Time of Youth, is using its resources to redress the wrongs of contemporary society.

Alcinda Honwana is visiting professor in the Development Policy and Practice program at the Open University.

WINNER OF THE HERSKOVITS AWARD Aiding Violence: The Development Enterprise in Rwanda

Peter Uvin

“Paradigm-rocking... Simply must be required reading for anyone who desires to set foot in an African nation, no matter how noble or lofty their goals.”—WorldViews

“This book should be read by everyone involved in development. For those with some knowledge of Rwanda, reading it is nothing short of a cathartic experience.”

—Development in Practice

“An invaluable anatomy of the way development aid to Rwanda before the genocide contributed to what took place—essential reading for anyone with a tender conscience and a strong stomach.”—The New Republic

Aiding Violence expresses outrage at the contradiction of genocide in a country considered at the time by Western aid agencies to be a model of development. Peter Uvin reveals how aid enterprises reacted—or failed to react—to the 1990s dynamics of militarization and polarization in Rwanda that resulted in mass atrocities. Outlining the profound structural basis on which the genocidal edifice was built, he exposes the practices of inequality, exclusion, and humiliation that were pervasive throughout the country.

Peter Uvin is Henry J. Leir Professor of International Humanitarian Studies at the Fletcher School, Tufts University.

2ND EDITION

Women and Development in Africa: How Gender Works

Michael Kevane

Praise for the previous edition:

“A unique and rare book. It is a welcome addition to the literature on women and development.... Kevane challenges economists and scholars of development to ask better questions, develop well-informed hypotheses, adopt more rigorous methods, and test their assumptions through solid empirical research.”

—Aili Mari Tripp, Politics & Gender

“An insightful book for undergraduates and graduate students with an interest in gender, international development, economics, or African studies.”

—Michael M. Walker, WID Bulletin

This new edition of Women and Development in Africa incorporates the results of more than a decade of new empirical and theoretical research. Michael Kevane provides a broad overview of the sources of underdevelopment in Africa and the role of gender in economic transactions, as well as a cogent analysis of the gendered realities of such issues as land rights, the control of labor, the marriage market, health care, education, and political representation.

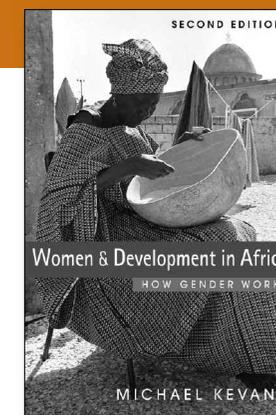

Michael Kevane is associate professor of economics at Santa Clara University.

The Making of Contemporary Africa: The Development of African Society Since 1800

Bill Freund

Praise for the previous editions:

“A landmark in African historiography.... well planned and clearly written.”

—John Lonsdale, Journal of African History

This comprehensive yet accessible text critically traces the complex trajectory of African society, culture, economy, and politics across more than two centuries.

Appearing nearly two decades after the previous edition was published, the third edition of The Making of Contemporary Africa has not only been revised throughout, but also includes two entirely new chapters: one specifically on the twenty-first century and one on postindependence cultural and social history.

Bill Freund is professor emeritus of economic history at the University of KwaZulu-Natal.

Inside African Politics

Pierre Englebort and Kevin C. Dunn

“A comprehensive, scholarly, and readable guide to (mostly) post-1990 Africa. Highly recommended.”

—Choice

“Englebort and Dunn have produced what will no doubt become the standard text for years to come: a sharply written, well-informed, and completely up-to-date book that should find a wide audience beyond the classroom, as well.” —Nicolas van de Walle, Foreign Affairs

This state-of-the-art introduction to contemporary African politics has been carefully designed to provide not only thorough coverage of the full range of core topics, but also an awareness and understanding of key theoretical issues and controversies.

Drawing on their extensive teaching and fieldwork experience, Pierre Englebort and Kevin Dunn offer:

- A straightforward, accessible style, making even complex ideas easy to understand.
- A balanced approach, exposing multiple perspectives on contested issues.
- A focus on both states and citizens, politics from above and below.
- Discussions of existing policies, as well as policy implications of different approaches.
- An abundance of rich data and illustrative examples.

The authors also highlight the contributions of African experiences to broader knowledge in the areas of comparative politics and international relations. Their book will serve both as an essential text and as a long term resource for students and scholars alike.

Pierre Englebort is professor of political science at Pomona College. Kevin C. Dunn is professor of political science at Hobart and William Smith Colleges.

“A welcome breath of fresh air.” —Orbis

“A well chosen and integrated whole.... Deserving of a prominent place in university programmes.” —Canadian Journal of Development Studies

This new edition of Understanding Contemporary Africa has been thoroughly revised to reflect the many significant events and trends of the past six years—seismic political changes, the impact of new information technology, the strong presence of China and other foreign powers, and much more.

The authors provide current analyses not only of history, politics, and economics, but also geography, environmental concerns, population shifts, and social and cultural issues. Each topic is covered in an accessible style, but with reference to the latest scholarship. Maps, photographs, and a table of basic political data enhance the text, which has made its place as the best available introduction to this diverse and complex continent.

April A. Gordon is professor emeritus of sociology and director of the Women's Studies Program at Winthrop University. Donald L. Gordon is professor of political science and director of the Richard W. Riley Institute of Government, Politics, and Public Leadership at Furman University.

Politics in Southern Africa: Transition and Transformation

Gretchen Bauer and Scott D. Taylor

“A very readable volume that should be extremely attractive for African politics courses.” —Choice

“A much-needed and comprehensive text and analysis of the sociopolitical economy of the eight major states of southern Africa.”
—I. William Zartman, Africa Today

The developments of the past seven years are reflected throughout this thoroughly revised edition of Politics in Southern Africa.

Bauer and Taylor systematically examine politics and society in the region. After introducing the themes that guide their analysis, in each of eight country studies they trace the country’s historical origins and then analyze state institutions, political parties and civil society, fundamentals of the political economy, and the major challenges faced by state and society. In the final section of the book, they investigate issues that transcend regional borders: women and politics, living with HIV/AIDS, and southern Africa’s role on the continent and in the world.

Gretchen Bauer is professor of political science at the University of Delaware. Scott D. Taylor is associate professor in the School of Foreign Service at Georgetown University.

Power Politics in Zimbabwe

Michael Bratton

“Compelling, thoroughly researched, and immensely informative.” —Ngonidzashe Munemo, Perspectives on Politics

“Bratton has offered us an instant classic of Zimbabwe studies, with implications reaching well beyond the borders of that troubled place.”

—Pierre Englebert, Journal of Democracy

Zimbabwe’s July 2013 election brought the country’s “inclusive” power-sharing interlude to an end and installed Mugabe and ZANU-PF for yet another—its seventh—term. Why? What explains the resilience of authoritarian rule in Zimbabwe?

Tracing the country’s elusive search for political stability across the decades, Michael Bratton offers a careful analysis of the failed power-sharing experiment, an account of its institutional origins, and an explanation of its demise.

Michael Bratton is University Distinguished Professor of political science at Michigan State University.

Africa’s International Relations: Balancing Domestic and Global Interests

Beth Elise Whitaker and John F. Clark

“Brings together a deep appreciation for the region’s historical context with important theoretical insights from the major traditions of international relations theory. This text will be of great value to both students and policymakers eager to understand how African countries relate to each other and the rest of the world.” —Michael Byron Nelson, Monmouth College

“To explain Africa’s international relations in one book is a daunting challenge, one that the authors have fully met.... I will certainly adopt this book as a required text for my classes.” —Emmanuel Uwalaka, St. Louis University

Comprehensive and engaging, this timely introduction to Africa’s international relations explores how power, interests, and ideas influence interactions both among the continent’s states and between African states and other actors in the global arena.

How has history shaped the international relations of African states and peoples? What role does identity play? How are foreign policies linked to domestic political dynamics, and especially to the pursuit of regime security? How are states grappling with the tensions between sovereignty and external pressures? These are among the questions answered as the authors address a wide range of ongoing and emerging challenges, all in historical and theoretical context. In addition, a case study at the end of each chapter illustrates key concepts and reflects an ongoing debate. The result is an ideal text for students, as well as an invaluable resource for researchers and policymakers.

The Cross and the River: Ethiopia, Egypt, and the Nile

Haggai Erlich

“An important book not only in Ethiopian and North African historiography, but also an original contribution to an area which ... has rarely been tackled in a comparative modern historical framework.”

—Irma Taddia,
Journal of Modern African Studies

“This eagerly awaited book is ... a complex, richly textured discussion ... satisfyingly detailed.”

—Peter P. Garretson,
Journal of African History

“Meticulously researched, bridges countries and areas usually relegated to separate mental compartments, and elaborates in detail a theme of undeniable significance for both Egyptian and Ethiopian history.”

—Donald Malcolm Reid, American Historical Review

The ongoing Egyptian-Ethiopian dispute over the Nile waters is potentially one of the most difficult issues on the current international agenda, central to the very life of the two countries. Analyzing the context of the dispute across a span of more than a thousand years, The Cross and the River delves into the heart of both countries' identities and cultures.

Party Politics and the Prospects for Democracy in North Africa

Lise Storm

“Lise Storm separates the wheat from the chaff in North Africa’s political party scene.... [She] has made an important, impressive contribution to our understanding of political parties in North Africa, particularly in the post-Arab Spring context.”

—Matt Buehler, Middle East Journal

“Storm’s book [is] very valuable.... Highly recommended.” —Choice

What are the prospects for democracy in North Africa in the wake of the Arab Spring? Addressing that question, Lise Storm provides a rich analysis of party politics in the region.

Storm focuses on Tunisia, Morocco, and Algeria, examining the key characteristics and political dynamics of each country's party system as they have evolved over time. Her research sheds light not only on the origins, development, and functioning of these parties, but also on their contribution to the survival of authoritarianism and their potential as vehicles for democratization.

Lise Storm is senior lecturer in Middle East politics at the Institute of Arab and Islamic Studies, University of Exeter.

“This excellently written book examines the extent to which colonial experience affects the policy choices and economic growth of countries in the African region.” —Choice

What accounts for the wide variations in developmental fortunes across African states? Englebert argues, with compelling statistics and the liberal use of examples, that differences in economic performance both in Africa and across the developing world can be linked to differences in historical state legitimacy.

Showing how the arbitrary nature of postcolonial African states conditions the type of policies that African elites adopt, Englebert establishes the impact of imported government institutions on government performance. His analysis calls into question the relevance of both structural adjustment and public-sector reform programs, pointing to institutional and territorial restructuring as prerequisites for sustainable African development.

Pierre Englebert is professor of politics at Pomona College.

Warlord Politics and African States

William Reno

“An important as well as a fascinating book.... In addition to providing riveting accounts of the skullduggery that passes for politics in at least parts of the continent, it places these within a frame of reference which encourages much wider reflection on the African condition.” —Christopher Clapham, Journal of Modern African Studies

“No other work so thoroughly examines state failure and how politics continues even when a state is dying.” —American Political Science Review

William Reno argues that the end of the Cold War changed the nature of sovereignty in Africa. Rulers cut off from overseas largesse are now vulnerable to threats from strongmen; enterprising strongmen join with marginalized groups to exploit regime weakness; opposing groups traffic in illegal drugs, weapons, and natural resources and even forge foreign commercial partnerships.

Focusing on the examples of Congo, Liberia, Nigeria, and Sierra Leone, Reno demonstrates how rulers hold on to power amidst cutoffs of foreign aid, collapsing economies, and disappearing bureaucracies. His evidence contradicts the conventional wisdom that Africa’s worst-off states are those increasingly marginal to the world economy. Ironically, closer integration of these states into global markets promotes warlord politics, not the bureaucratic forms of administration that most studies of reform in Africa prescribe.

William Reno is professor of political science at Northwestern University.

Comparative Politics of the Global South: Linking Concepts and Cases

December Green and Laura Luehrmann

Praise for the previous editions:

“This book outshines any other text I have seen.... The authors do a wonderful job of synthesizing a great deal of information and presenting it in terms that should engage an audience of undergraduates.”

—Dwight Hahn, John Carroll University

“The writing style is lively and the detail is impressive.... another welcome innovation is the welding together of the discussion of key issues with the eight country cases.” —Ross Burkhardt, Boise State University

In this now classic text, December Green and Laura Luehrmann show how history, economics, and politics converge to create the realities of life in the Global South.

The authors offer an innovative blend of theory and empirical material as they introduce the politics of what was once called the “third world.” They consistently link theoretical concepts to a set of eight contemporary case studies: China, Egypt, Indonesia, Iran, Mexico, Nigeria, Peru, and Zimbabwe.

Features of the fourth edition, revised and updated from cover to cover, include: an entirely new case study, Egypt; analysis of the status of regime transitions around the world; a “report card” on the Millennium Development Goals; more discussion of everyday forms of resistance; and new material on such continuing challenges as migration, human trafficking, weapons proliferation, pandemic diseases, and the impact of climate change.

The result is a text that has been successfully designed to challenge students’ preconceptions, arouse their curiosity, and foster critical thinking.

December Green and Laura Luehrmann are professors of political science at Wright State University.

Doing Comparative Politics: An Introduction to Approaches and Issues

Timothy C. Lim

“Covering basic theoretical approaches in the field and then applying them to specific cases or questions, this text helps students to see how theory is actually used in practice.” —Michael Baun, Valdosta State University

Praise for the previous editions:

“A concise, accessible and well-organized approach suitable for both undergraduate and graduate courses.... Doing Comparative Politics puts students in the driver’s seat as they apply what they learn to timely, substantive debates in political science.” —Nicholas Spina, Edgewood College

“Superbly demonstrates how comparativists use theory to grapple with important questions. Undergraduate and graduate students alike will find this engaging and well-structured text useful.... Most important, Lim makes abstract concepts accessible in ways that are neither patronizing nor trivial.”

—Laura Luehrmann, Wright State University

“Unlike most other texts in comparative politics that focus on country cases, Lim’s valuable book gives students the skills to become critical thinkers and to actually DO comparative politics themselves.” —Claudio Holzner, University of Utah

This systematic, user friendly, and refreshingly unusual introduction to comparative politics has not only been updated and refined in the third edition, but also fully revised to reflect the impact of major new developments in world politics.

Designed to teach students how to think comparatively and theoretically about the world they live in, the book is organized around a set of critical questions—why are poor countries poor? why is East Asia relatively prosperous? what makes a democracy? how can we explain terrorism and genocide? what leads people to mobilize around a cause?—each the topic of a full chapter. These issue chapters are based on the solid methodological and theoretical foundation laid out in the first part of the book, and the entire text is enhanced with case studies and graphics.

Timothy C. Lim is professor of political science at California State University, Los Angeles.
