Adventures in Zambian Politics: A Story in Black and White

Guy Scott

"A deeply revealing and valuable study for those who wish to understand how politics actually works in Zambia and beyond, and how it has been shaped by extraordinary individuals like Michael Sata and, indeed, Guy Scott."

—from the Foreword by Miles Larmer, University of Oxford

As Miles Larmer writes in the foreword, Adventures in Zambian Politics is unlike any political memoir you have ever read.

It is ... A political history of Zambia from colonial times to the present. A revealing insider account of politics and government within a modern African state. A story about race in Africa. A chronicle of the rise and fall of two improbable political allies who wanted to change Zambian politics: Michael Sata, whose convoluted political career led him to become president in 2011, and Guy Scott, Sata's vice president and, after Sata's death, acting president of Zambia. Not least, it is a pleasure to read.

Guy Scott's absorbing narrative of his career and Michael Sata's in the chaotic world of African politics tells a uniquely Zambian story. But it is also a special contribution to our understanding of democracy and democratization across Africa.

Guy Scott was acting president of Zambia after the death of President Michael Sata. Prior to that he was vice president (2011–2014) and has also served as minister of agriculture and an opposition leader in the Zambian parliament.

Africa's Insurgents: Navigating an Evolving Landscape

Morten Bøås and Kevin C. Dunn, editors

“Comprehensive, timely, empirically rich, and conceptually innovative.... sure to pique the interest of a wide range of readers. This is by all accounts the most exhaustive collection of contemporary analyses of this critically important topic.”

—Matthew I. Mitchell, University of Saskatchewan

Amid an array of shifting national, regional, and global forces, how have African insurgents managed to adapt and survive? And what differences and similarities can be found, both among the continent's diverse rebellions and guerilla movements and between them and movements elsewhere in the world? Addressing these issues, the authors of Africa's Insurgents explore how new groups are emerging and existing ones changing in response to an evolving landscape.

Morten Bøås is research professor at the Norwegian Institute of International Affairs. Kevin C. Dunn is professor of political science at Hobart and William Smith Colleges.

The Fates of African Rebels: Victory, Defeat, and the Politics of Civil War

Christopher Day

“Theoretically sophisticated and empirically rich, this is an impressive contribution to the literature on African conflicts. Day offers innovative and compelling arguments while exploring fundamental questions about the fates of African rebels.” —Kevin Dunn, Hobart and William Smith Colleges

What determines the outcome for rebels in contemporary African civil wars? How are “victory” and “defeat” measured? Is there any connection between a rebel group's organization and its fate? What implications do the answers to these questions have for policymakers concerned with ongoing armed conflicts? Addressing these issues and more, Christopher Day explores the relationship between rebel groups and regime politics in Africa.

Christopher Day is associate professor of political science at the College of Charleston.

The Arab World Upended: Revolution and Its Aftermath in Tunisia and Egypt

David B. Ottaway

“Ottaway’s ... account of the revolutionary upheavals in Tunisia and Egypt (2010–16) is essential reading for all those seeking to better understand the significance of these events.”

—Rosemary Hollis, Middle East Journal

After the autocratic regimes in the seemingly unassailable police states of Tunisia and Egypt suddenly collapsed in 2011, the Islamic parties that took over quickly succumbed in turn to further massive uprisings, this time by disaffected secularists and, in the case of Egypt, with the support of the army. What explains this? And why do the current regimes in both countries remain so fragile?

Addressing these questions, drawing on years of first-hand, in-depth research, David Ottaway explores the causes of the revolutions in Tunisia and Egypt, the reasons for their radically differing outcomes, and the likely trajectory of the two countries’ political development.

David B. Ottaway, after receiving a Ph.D. in public law and government from Columbia University, worked as a foreign correspondent and then an investigative reporter in Washington, DC, for 35 years. At present, he is a Middle East Fellow at the Woodrow Wilson Center.

Haile Selassie: His Rise, His Fall

Haggai Erlich

“Insightful, comprehensive, and remarkably well documented... Erlich’s new biography of Haile Selassie is a fresh and magisterial overview of the emperor’s life and Ethiopian history in the twentieth century. I recommend it highly.”

—Peter Garretson, Florida State University

With scholars far from agreement in their opinions of Ethiopia’s Haile Selassie, the questions remain: Who was Haile Selassie? What was the secret of his survival across half a century—and how did he come to be a virtual exile in his own country, then murdered, the last emperor in a centuries-old dynasty?

Haggai Erlich’s Haile Selassie, full of fresh perspectives and insights, adds much to our understanding of the emperor. Drawing on new archival sources, as well as decades of research on Ethiopia, Erlich tells the multifaceted, sometimes tragic, story not only of a single individual, but also of modern Ethiopia both domestically and in world affairs.

Haggai Erlich is professor emeritus of Middle East and African history at Tel Aviv University.

African Actors in International Security: Shaping Contemporary Norms

Katharina P. Coleman and Thomas K. Tieku, editors

“Fills a longstanding gap.... The book deepens our understanding of normative processes while also demonstrating the extensive and innovative nature of African work in the realm of international peace and security norm development.”

—Jane Boulden, Royal Military College of Canada

What impact have African actors had on perceptions of and responses to current international security challenges? Are there international peace and security norms with African roots? How can actors that lack the power and financial resources of Western states help to shape prevailing conceptions of appropriate behavior in international politics?

Addressing these questions, the authors of African Actors in International Security identify and explore the diverse pathways by which African governments, IGOs, NGOs, and individuals can and do influence the normative structure of contemporary international relations.

Katharina P. Coleman is associate professor of political science at the University of British Columbia. Thomas K. Tieku is associate professor of political science at King’s University College, Western University.

Africa’s International Relations: Balancing Domestic and Global Interests

Beth Elise Whitaker and John F. Clark

“Brings together a deep appreciation for the region’s historical context with important theoretical insights from the major traditions of international relations theory. This text will be of great value to both students and policymakers eager to understand how African countries relate to each other and the rest of the world.”

—Michael Byron Nelson, Monmouth College

“To explain Africa’s international relations in one book is a daunting challenge, one that the authors have fully met.... I will certainly adopt this book as a required text for my classes.” —Emmanuel Uwalaka, St. Louis University

Comprehensive and engaging, this timely introduction to Africa’s international relations explores how power, interests, and ideas influence interactions both among the continent’s states and between African states and other actors in the global arena.

How has history shaped the international relations of African states and peoples? What role does identity play? How are foreign policies linked to domestic political dynamics, and especially to the pursuit of regime security? How are states grappling with the tensions between sovereignty and external pressures? These are among the questions answered as the authors address a wide range of ongoing and emerging challenges, all in historical and theoretical context. In addition, a case study at the end of each chapter illustrates key concepts and reflects an ongoing debate. The result is an ideal text for students, as well as an invaluable resource for researchers and policymakers.

The Making of Contemporary Africa:
 The Development of African Society
 Since 1800

Bill Freund

Praise for the previous editions:

“A landmark in African historiography.... well planned and clearly written.”

—John Lonsdale, Journal of African History

This comprehensive yet accessible text critically traces the complex trajectory of African society, culture, economy, and politics across more than two centuries.

Appearing nearly two decades after the previous edition was published, the third edition of The Making of Contemporary Africa has not only been revised throughout, but also includes two entirely new chapters: one specifically on the twenty-first century and one on postindependence cultural and social history.

Bill Freund is professor emeritus of economic history at the University of KwaZulu-Natal.

3RD EDITION
African Development: Making Sense of the Issues and Actors

Todd J. Moss and Danielle Resnick

Praise for the previous editions:

“Thoughtful, well written.... [This] book leads the student to a deep understanding of the actors at work in Africa’s development.”

—Barry Riddell, Canadian Journal of Development Studies

“[Moss] walks the reader briskly through Africa’s colonial legacy, the syndrome of personal rule, the economic liabilities of conflict, and the challenges of democratic reform.... Provides a thorough and critical but fair-minded treatment in a style that is plainspoken and often witty.... An excellent resource.” —Peter Lewis, Foreign Affairs

“An excellent introduction to current political and economic issues in Africa.... Highly recommended.” —Choice

Both authoritative and accessible, African Development introduces the issues, actors, and institutions at play in development trajectories across sub-Saharan Africa.

This new edition, thoroughly updated, includes an entirely new chapter devoted to key demographic trends in the region, especially rapid urbanization and the distinct “youth bulge.” There is also a review of major democratic gains and disappointments since 2011; analysis of renewed internal armed conflicts; and attention to the contemporary sovereign debt crisis relative to the structural adjustment debt of earlier decades.

The book uniquely brings to life the collective impact of history, economics, and politics on development in the region.

Todd J. Moss is senior fellow at the Center for Global Development and non-resident scholar at Rice University’s Baker Institute. Danielle Resnick is senior research fellow in the Development Strategy and Governance Division of the International Food Policy Research Institute.

Rwanda's Popular Genocide: A Perfect Storm

Jean-Paul Kimonyo

"An important contribution.... Highly recommended." —Choice

"Worthy of the highest recommendation, especially for college and academic library collections." —Library Bookwatch

Praise from the reviews of the French-language edition:

"[Kimonyo] studies the genocide from an angle that has been grossly under-researched until now.... He has the courage ... to challenge some of the current regime's fundamental tenets.... [His analysis] offers new insights into the dynamics of the anti-Tutsi violence."

—Filip Reyntjens, African Studies Review

Why did Rwanda's rural Hutus participate so massively, and so personally, in the country's 1994 genocide of its Tutsi population? Given all that has been written already about this horrific episode, is there still more that can be learned? Answering these questions, Jean-Paul Kimonyo's social and economic history explores at the deepest level the role both of power relations among Rwanda's grassroots citizens, political parties, and the state and of socioeconomic factors vs. politically/socially constructed ethnicity.

Transforming Rwanda: Challenges on the Road to Reconstruction

Jean-Paul Kimonyo

Since the end of its genocidal civil war in 1994, Rwanda has embarked on an ambitious, and often controversial, process of reconstruction. Jean-Paul Kimonyo comprehensively analyzes that process in the political, military, socio-economic, and cultural arenas.

Kimonyo combines the objectivity of a scholar with the front-row perspective of a participant to provide an unparalleled analysis of the ups and downs of Rwanda's transformation. Drawing extensively on primary sources and grounding his study in historical context, he traces and analyzes the stages of reconstruction as they have continued to unfold since the election of Paul Kagame to the presidency.

Jean-Paul Kimonyo is a senior adviser in the Office of the President of Rwanda and also a fellow at the Rift Valley Institute.

Electoral Violence in Sub-Saharan Africa: Causes and Consequences

Stephanie M. Burchard

"A book that will make essential reading for scholars of an emerging research agenda."
—Nicholas Rush Smith, Perspectives on Politics

After decades of experimentation with various forms of dictatorship and autocracy, most sub-Saharan African countries adopted multiparty elections in the 1990s—a development widely celebrated as a sign that the region was moving toward democracy. This embrace of elections, however, has often been accompanied by unanticipated violence, raising important questions: Are violent elections a normal part of the process in new democracies? Does the quality and conduct of elections matter for democratic consolidation? Most fundamentally, what does the persistence of electoral violence mean for the future of democracy in Africa?

Addressing these questions with a combination of rigorous qualitative and quantitative approaches, Stephanie Burchard explores both the causes and consequences of electoral violence in sub-Saharan Africa.

Stephanie M. Burchard is on the research staff of the Africa Program at the Institute for Defense Analyses.

Coping with Crisis in African States

Peter M. Lewis and John W. Harbeson, editors

"Provides a lucid approach to assessing the factors that create vulnerabilities, or possibilities for resilience, in the face of crisis ... complemented by rich empirical country chapters and clear policy recommendations."
—Rachel Beatty Riedl, Northwestern University

Although large-scale conflicts, political upheavals, and social violence are common problems throughout Africa, individual countries vary greatly in both their susceptibility to these crises and their capacities for responding effectively. What accounts for this variance? How do crises emerge, and how are they resolved? When are unexpected events most likely to spiral into crisis? Are there institutions and policies that can help to manage adverse shocks?

The authors of Coping with Crisis in African States assess the capability for crisis management in countries across the continent, shedding new light on the sources of instability in the region, as well as on comparative questions of state capacity and resilience.

The US Military in Africa: Enhancing Security and Development?

Jessica Piombo, editor

“US Military in Africa is the most informative and comprehensive book on this subject. Simply put, it is the best thus far.”

—Jay Carr, H-War, H-Net Reviews

“Provides a compelling analysis and authoritative assessment of ... the USA’s role in forging comprehensiveness in military, foreign and development policy.”

—Stefan Gänzle, Journal of Modern African Studies

“Determining what should and should not be U.S. policy aims in Africa and what the relationship between security and development actors should look like (if it should exist at all) is no easy task.... Those looking to explore these questions—and to debunk myths about AFRICOM’S capabilities and aims in Africa—would do well to read The US Military in Africa and to keep its critical reflections in mind.”

—Laura Seay, The Washington Post

Recent US security policy toward Africa has adopted a multidimensional approach—including the use of military assets to promote economic development and good governance—that has raised questions and generated considerable debate. Can actors like the US military develop appropriate methods to address both US and African interests? What blend of civilian and military programs are most likely to produce the best outcomes? And more fundamentally, is the military the appropriate actor to undertake governance and development projects?

The authors of The US Military in Africa explore these questions, providing an insightful combination of conceptual analysis and rich case studies.

The Limits of Democratic Governance in South Africa

Louis A. Picard and Thomas Mogale

“Excellent.... This book gets well under the skin of contemporary South Africa. Highly recommended.” —Choice

In the transition from apartheid rule to democratic governance in South Africa, what has been the impact on South African society at its base—on the people in the country’s cities, towns, villages, and farms? Louis Picard and Thomas

Mogale offer answers to this fundamental question, tracing historical trends and measuring change (or the lack of it) in the dynamic between the promise of local participatory governance and the realities of a hierarchical state.

Louis A. Picard is the professor of public and international affairs and African studies and director of the Ford Institute for Human Security at the University of Pittsburgh.

Thomas Mogale is director of the Graduate School of Public and Development Management at the University of the Witwatersrand.

CHOICE OUTSTANDING ACADEMIC BOOK! Power Politics in Zimbabwe

Michael Bratton

“Compelling, thoroughly researched, and immensely informative.... Power Politics will also generate a great deal of discussion among Zimbabwe specialists as they confront the lessons and implications of Bratton’s provocative analysis.” —Ngonidzashe Munemo, Perspectives on Politics

“Bratton has offered us an instant classic of Zimbabwe studies, with implications reaching well beyond the borders of that troubled place.”

—Pierre Englebret, Journal of Democracy

“Thoughtful, well-written, and persuasive, this has to be the preeminent book on contemporary Zimbabwe. Highly recommended.”

—Choice

Zimbabwe’s July 2013 election brought the country’s “inclusive” power-sharing interlude to an end and installed Mugabe and ZANU-PF for yet another—its seventh—term. Why? What explains the resilience of authoritarian rule in Zimbabwe?

Tracing the country’s elusive search for political stability across the decades, Michael Bratton offers a careful analysis of the failed power-sharing experiment, an account of its institutional origins, and an explanation of its demise. In the process, he explores key challenges of political transition: constitution making, elections, security-sector reform, and transitional justice.

“Interesting, well researched, and satisfyingly comparative.... A welcome addition to studies of contemporary democratization.”

—Jeffrey Haynes, Democratization

“An innovative analysis of the relationship between Islam and democracy.... This is an important book for students of the Islamic world and of democratization. Highly recommended.” —Choice

Belying assertions of the incompatibility of Islam and democracy, many Muslim-majority countries—including Mali and Senegal—are now or have been democratic. Paul Kubicek draws on the experiences of those countries to explore the relationship between political manifestations of Islam and democratic politics.

Kubicek’s comparative analysis allows him to highlight the common features that create conditions amenable to democratic development in Muslim-majority countries—and to show how actors in Muslim democracies in fact draw on concepts within Islam to contribute to democratization.

Paul Kubicek is professor of political science at Oakland University.

What Is Political Islam?

Jocelyne Cesari

“Cesari provides a new and powerful framework for understanding the conditions of possibility for political Islam in a wide range of countries.... Her book represents the most important work on political Islam to appear in more than a decade.”

—Peter Mandaville, George Mason University

“A grounding work.... Cesari adds nuance to the question of how modernity evolved in the Muslim context and unravels common assumptions and cemented theories pertaining to political Islam.... Fascinating and unique.” —Melissa Finn, University of Waterloo

The debate continues unabated: Is political Islam decipherable through the tenets of the Islamic tradition—or is it a tool of secular actors who shrewdly misuse religious references? Is it an expression of modernity, or a return to the past? Eschewing these dichotomies, Jocelyne Cesari demystifies the continuous process of interaction between secular and religious actors and institutions that is at the core of political mobilization in the name of Islam.

Cesari traces the origins of political Islam to the inception of the modern nation-state, revealing the decisive role of secular nationalist rulers in its creation. In the process, she puts to rest the myth that there has been a lack of modernization in the Muslim world—and shows how that myth has proven dangerous. Ranging from Senegal to Egypt, from Indonesia to Iraq, her analysis provides a much needed corrective to the “conventional wisdom.”

Jocelyne Cesari is professor of religion and politics at the University of Birmingham; senior research fellow at Georgetown University’s Berkley Center for Religion, Peace, and World Affairs; and professorial fellow at the Australian Catholic University.
