

Human Rights in International Politics: An Introduction

Franke Wilmer

This comprehensive introduction to the study of human rights in international politics blends concrete developments with theoretical inquiry, illuminating both in the process.

Franke Wilmer presents the nuts and bolts of human rights concepts, actors, and implementation before grappling with issues ranging from war and genocide to social and economic needs to racial and religious discrimination. Two themes—the tension between values and interests, and the role of the state as both a protector of human rights and a perpetrator of human rights violations—are reflected throughout the text. The result is a clear, accessible exposition of the evolution of international human rights, as well as the challenges that those rights pose, in the context of the state system.

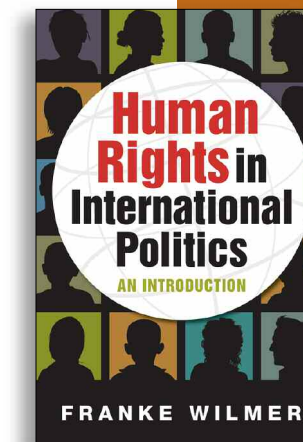

Franke Wilmer is professor of political science and international relations at Montana State University.

Debating Human Rights

Daniel P.L. Chong

"An excellent, concise summary of today's most debated human rights topics."

—Elise Carlson-Rainer, E-International Relations

"An accessible and thought-provoking discussion of the key controversies."

—Gillian McFadyen, International Journal

"Excellent.... A thoughtful, up-to-date, evenhanded guide for the study of human rights. Highly recommended."—Choice

Even as human rights provide the most widely shared moral language of our time, they also spark highly contested debates among scholars and policymakers. When should states protect human rights? Does the global war on terror necessitate the violation of some rights? Are food, housing, and health care valid human rights? Debating Human Rights introduces the theory and practice of international human rights by examining fourteen controversies in the field.

Daniel Chong presents the major arguments on both sides of each debate, encouraging readers to think critically and form their own opinions. Designed for classroom use, the structure of the book makes it easy for students to become familiar with the major political and legal actors in the global human rights system and to understand the practical challenges of protecting civil, political, social, and economic rights.

Daniel P.L. Chong is assistant professor of political science at Rollins College.

Human Rights, Revolution, and Reform in the Muslim World

Anthony Tirado Chase

“An important and challenging book for Middle East and human rights scholars.”

—Turan Kayaoglu, Muslim World Book Review

“Powerfully demonstrating the direct relevance of human rights for the historic tremors of the Arab Spring, this intelligent and well-informed study makes for stimulating reading.... Chase has produced a thought-provoking and eminently readable account.”

—Ann Elizabeth Mayer, International Journal of Middle East Studies

Do human rights inform the nature of politics in the Muslim world today? If so, how? And perhaps more fundamentally, why? Linking these questions in a provocative way, Anthony Tirado Chase persuasively rejects popular arguments that there is an incompatibility between human rights and Islam.

Chase uses a range of local developments as his point of departure, in the process stressing the importance of focusing on the diverse Muslim world rather than on one of its parts. He carefully supports his assertions with examples from contentious “on the ground” debates. Adopting a comprehensive view of human rights, he offers a fresh take on the debates over democracy, free expression, and social rights in Muslim-majority states, as well as on the role of movements within those states in shaping what constitutes global human rights.

Anthony Tirado Chase is associate professor of diplomacy and world affairs at Occidental College.

Human Rights in the Global Political Economy: Critical Processes

Tony Evans

“An important contribution to the debate on human rights.... well written and accessible.”

—Neil Stammers, University of Essex

“Both interesting and thought-provoking.... This timely text explores the impact of a globalized economy on the future of the human rights regime.”

—Rhonda Callaway, Sam Houston State University

Tony Evans critically investigates the theory and practice of human rights in the current global order.

Evans covers a range of contentious debates as he considers critiques of the prevailing conceptions of human rights. He then explores the changing global context of human rights issues, the nature and status of human rights within that context, and recent institutional responses. With its emphasis on policy and process, his book offers a rich analysis of the politics of today’s human rights regime.

Tony Evans is professor of global politics at Winchester University.
